

Directors and their Duties

Running a company is quite different to being a partner or practice manager.

Directors of companies are subject to a range of legal requirements.

Failure to comply with the law could result in harsh penalties.

Do you realise company directors can be held personally responsible for such compliance?

Benefits you will gain from our seminar on Directors and their Duties

This seminar will provide you with the knowledge and confidence to understand the complex external obligations and important legal duties for directors and will include the following topics:

Directors - generally

- What are directors?
- Appointment
- What is the difference between executive and non-executive directors?
- How are directors appointed?
- How do directors lose office?
- What does a board of directors actually do?
- What powers of management do directors have?
- What information has to be provided to Companies House about directors?

Duties of Directors

- What general duties do directors have?
- Fiduciary duty.
- Duties to act within their powers.
- Duties to promote the success of the company.
- What are the directors' duties to avoid conflicts of interest?

- What are the directors' duties to declare interest in proposed transactions or arrangements?
- What liabilities can directors have?
- What remedies are there against directors who have acted contrary to their duties?

Why choose Primary Care Law?

We have been delivering legal seminars for over 25 years, helping GPs and Practice Managers across the UK to improve their understanding of employment, health and safety and company law issues.

We deliver our seminars to groups of no more than 20 delegates, because we believe it is important for our delegates to have the opportunity to ask questions about their real issues, and to have sufficient time for discussions during the day.

Our speakers deliver our seminars in a dynamic and entertaining way, ensuring that delegates' attention is held, and allowing them to learn in an informal, supportive and participative environment.

All our seminars are authorised and accredited by The Solicitors' Regulation Authority and authorised by The Bar Standards Board.
